When I saw the weather forecast, I was about to blame the OD committee for changing the event date (originally planned for the previous Saturday when we had clear blue skies). The weather on the day turned out to be much better than the forecast with clear skies visible just to the NW for most of the morning and only the occasional spot of rain, even if it was rather muddy underfoot. Turnout was good and the courses and new map were well received. Those who struggled a little on the Yellow course should take heart from the fact that some legs were more Orange standard – a limitation of planning to use only the permanent course sites even though the posts had not yet been “sunk” into the freshly dug holes. A special thanks to John Embrey for enthusiastically volunteering to collect in half of the controls.

The permanent course should be complete and ready for use in a few weeks.
